

DAISY STATE PARK

Daisy State Park exists to provide access to Ouachita Mountain scenery and the clear waters of Lake Greeson while encouraging a feeling of community where generations are connected and memories are made.

Surrounded by the beautiful Ouachita Mountains is Lake Greeson, a 7,000-acre Corps of Engineers impoundment formed in 1950 from the Little Missouri River. Famous for its clean, clear water fishermen catch stripers, black bass, crappie, bream, catfish, white bass, and smallmouth. This deep lake is also stocked with northern pike and walleye. The river above and below the lake is stocked with rainbow trout for winter and spring trout fishing.

Daisy State Park is on the north end of Lake Greeson just off U.S. Highway 70 near the town of Daisy. The park is surrounded by vast timberlands (privately owned); add the Ouachita National Forest just a few miles to the north, and this area offers a bonanza of year-round recreation. From fishing, boating, camping, hiking, swimming, waterskiing and scuba diving, to in-season hunting on timber company and U.S. Forest Service lands (no hunting in state parks), to touring backcountry roads, southwest Arkansas offers some of the best outdoor fun in the state.

During your stay at Daisy State Park, you may want to visit Caney Creek Wilderness, Camp Albert Pike, Shady Lake, Little Missouri Falls, or Winding Stairs, all in nearby Ouachita National Forest where cascading streams, mountain trails and high country picnic sites provide days of enjoyable outings.

You can enjoy whitewater floating and fishing on the Little Missouri, Cossatot, and Caddo rivers, which offer floating for most every experience level up to Class V. River levels and difficulty are dependent upon rainfall. Ask the park staff for information and floating locations.

A beautiful drive into the mountains to the west will take you to Cossatot River State Park-Natural Area. The scenery, trails and river here are worth the drive; the exhibits in the new visitor center are a bonus.

Just 23 miles south is Crater of Diamonds State Park, the only diamond-producing volcanic "pipe" open to the public in North America. For a small fee, you can search for diamonds and keep all you find!
